Landfill fire 'getting expensive'

BELLE GLADE—With city forces putting in 96 man-hours and dumping 7 million gallons of water a day onto it, a fire smoldering in the city landfill since Nov. 2 "is getting expensive," Public Works Director Ron Sigmon said Monday night.

Sigmon said he had no idea what the cost to the city has been so far but he remembered estimating Saturday that the fire had cost more than $5,000 to combat.

He said the city had been renting an eight-inch hydraulic pump for several days to put water on the fire and last Thursday, United States Sugar had loaned the city two "Rainbirds" to add their water to the volume already being provided.

City Fire Chief A.E. "Pete" Webb said one of the rainbirds had broken down temporarily over the weekend but both were again in operation Wednesday morning after city forces broke up the landfill to some extent Tuesday with a bulldozer.

Sigmon said it is believed the fire began when some Cubans, who have been sneaking into the area to camp at night in spite of having been removed several times by police officers, accidentally let a cooking fire get out of control.

He said the city is employing a minimum of 96 men-hours a day to fight the fire, at about $485 a day, is paying $289 a day for the 8 inch pump and is paying for the fuel for the two rainbirds, one gasoline pump and three diesel pumps. He said Monday night he had no breakdown on the cost yet.

Webb said Wednesday morning he felt the fire was "well under control" and while he couldn't estimate when it would be finally extinguished, said plans are to continue putting a large volume of water on the 40-foot high landfill for several more days to be sure it isn't still smoldering in the near future when it's finally capped.

The original plans were to cap the landfill on Oct. 1, when a transfer station was supposed to begin operation, with all the garbage in the Glades being hauled to the Lantana landfill.

Construction of the transfer station fell behind, however, and Sigmon said construction has been halted during the fire because of too much smoke. There is now no estimate on when the landfill will be capped.

BELLE GLADE — City Commissioners eliminated 54 of 60 applicants for the job of city manager during a workshop session Tuesday and decided to contact two of the remaining six for job interviews as soon as possible.

The commissioners used a ranking system to place Ken S. Nipper, until recently the city manager of Lake Wales, at the top of the list of applicants with Joseph M. Mitchell, city manager of Mulberry, in the number two slot.

Using a profile they worked up last week in another workshop, the commissioners first came up with a list of 11 applicants whose resumes they reviewed together, eliminating three more during the review before ranking them.

Of the remaining eight, each commissioner then chose his favorite applicants, assigning four points to his favorite, three the next favorite and so on. The points were then tallied from the lists of the four commissioners present.

Once the points were tallied, the commissioners decided to notify the two top point getters to come to Belle Glade for interviews. If they decide not to hire either of the first two, they'll go on to the next two, then on to the fifth and sixth candidates.

Nipper received 12 points of a possible 16 and Mitchell received 11. Next on the list were Neil Michaelson, director of finance and administration for the Jefferson County, Ala. Department of Health, with eight points, James A. Miceli, a municipal af-

BELLE GLADE—Former City Manager Robert Sanders' name surfaced again during the city commission meeting Monday night, the first time during a discussion on whether the city should file criminal charges concerning an incident in Miami and the second when his request for a determination on the investigation of his files was relayed.

Sanders' name wasn't actually mentioned in the public part of the first discussion but Mayor Tom Altman confirmed he was one of the parties involved who allegedly forged a city official's name to a hotel check for food and drink during the Florida League of City meeting in Miami.

Altman said he asked City Attorney John Baker last week to make a presentation on the "bizarre" incident. Altman said he understood Sanders' wife, Kit, had signed a bill in the amount of $98.22, using the name of City Clerk June Boglioli, for breakfast for "about six people". He said about $25 of the bill was for a tip.

In his presentation to the commission, Baker said he was asked to determine whether the city should pay the bill. He advised the commissioners to authorize the payment.

He said he was also asked to recommend a course of action after presenting the options, which he said included turning the matter over to the Dade County State's Attorney for criminal investigation, filing civil charges or simply asking for reimbursement.

That reimbursement, it was believed during the Monday night meeting, was made Monday, when Anthony Williams, a mutual friend, delivered $100 to Acting City Manager and Finance Director Frank Anderson, saying it had been given him by his former wife, Jane Russell, who now lives in Key West and who was present during the original incident.

Anderson said during the Monday meeting he hadn't been told what the money was for, that it wasn't clear whether it was meant to pay for the breakfast or something else.

Williams confirmed Tuesday his role in making restitution for Mrs. Sanders but Ms. Russell and Sanders said in a telephone conversation from Key West that the money had actually been paid by Public Works Director Ron Sigmon. It was from Sigmon's room that the breakfast was ordered.

Ms. Russell said she hadn't seen her former husband over the weekend, that she'd neither given nor sent him money nor delivered a message from Mrs. Sanders.

Ms. Russell further said that when the breakfast was ordered, Sigmon had said it was all right to make the order, that the room was part of the city's hospitality suite and, "when the bill was signed, it was at his orders."

At first, Ms. Russell demurred when asked who actually signed the bill, then confirmed it had been Mrs. Sanders who'd signed it. When asked what name Mrs. Sanders signed to the bill, Ms. Russell replied, "I don't want to talk about that."

Ms. Russell said she believed Sigmon asked Williams to give the $100 to Anderson, "because he's the one who feels guilty about it."

Sanders said, in the same telephone conversation, that he was on the balcony of the hotel room at the time the meal was ordered but he understood at the time it had been approved by Sigmon. He also said Sigmon had phoned him Monday in Key West to tell him he was going to pay the bill.

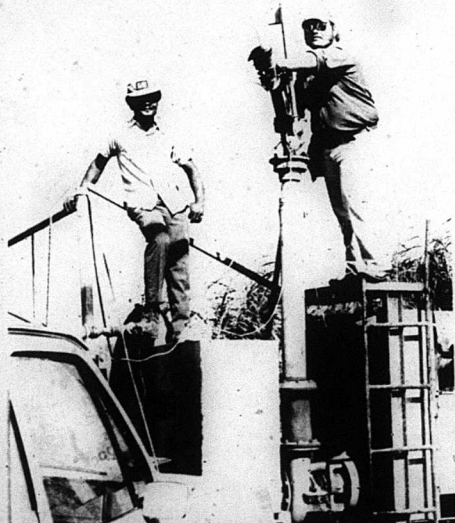

Going further, Sanders said he had earlier Tuesday held a conversation with Baker and Baker had asked him what the $100 payment from Mrs. Sanders was for. He said he told Baker that neither he nor his wife had sent the $100 and if and when he receives a letter from Anderson asking for an explanation, as directed screening, they didn't want to hire any of the remaining 54 applicants.

Of the finalists, Mayor Tom Altman noted that Nipper was only on three of the ballots but he was in first place in all three. Mitchell and Michaelson were both on all four ballots but neither was named first on any ballot and Salavara was only

All of us make little mistakes now and then and occasionally we make a huge blunder, but usually these human errors are soon forgotten by our friends, and in many instances, by our enemies.

Not so in the business world. When a corporation makes a blunder it is there for all the world to see, for competitors to take advantage of for years to come. In fact some of these corporate blunders will never be forgotten.

Ohio State University International Business Program Chairman David Ricks has, for the last ten years, spent his time ferreting out blunders made by the big businesses and has compiled more than 200 business and advertising campaigns that backfired in one form or another.

Through the use of ingenious devices and much skulduggery, the Herald-Observer has obtained some of these blunders the corporations would rather forget:

- A baby food company tried unsuccessfully to peddle its product in a most illiterate African nation with a label showing a cuddly infant. It turned out

Different strokes for different folks

African thought the jars contained groundup babies.

- Chevrolet was puzzled when its Nova model, popular in this country would not sell in Latin America markets. Firm officials finally figured out that in Spanish, Nova means "does not go."
- An airline advertised the "rendezvous lounges" on its 707 flights in Brazil and lost customers. Rendezvous in Portuguese is a place to have sex.
- Pepsodent's promise of white teeth brought no new customers in part of Southeast Asia—where people of status chew betelnuts and black, discolored teeth are a symbol of prestige.
- Cultural differences also accounted for a great number of blunders.
- Campbell Soup was not selling in England. The trouble was the soup cans looked so small next to the English cans selling for the same price. In England, soup is sold with the water already added.

- An aircraft company used ads in India picturing Pakistanis. Americans may not be able to tell the difference, but Indians can.
- A firm tried selling refrigerators to mostly Moslem Middle East with an ad picturing their appliance chock-full of food—including a giant ham on the middle shelf.

Hiring translators can be a tricky business in the corporate world, too.

- "Body by Fisher" became "Corpse by Fisher" in a Belgium ad. Pepsi's "Come Alive with Pepsi" in Germany became "Come alive out of the Grave." A car wash turned into a "car enemy" in another ad involving translations.

Ricks counts McDonald's advertising of "Big Macs" in Canada as embarrassing, but not a blunder.

In French-Canadian slang big macs are big busts, but the giant hamburgers are still selling wonderfully. Similarly in some South American areas, an American company that manufactures feminine napkins noticed an increase in sales.

They soon discovered farmers were buying the napkins in large quantities and using them as dust masks.

And then there was the fast food chain company that decided to locate a West German hamburger stand on a street that tests showed was heavily travelled. The hamburgers didn't sell. Finally company officials checked next door. It was a bordello.

on one ballot but was the top man on that ballot. Nipper, 44, is married and has five children. His education includes a masters degree in business administration and a bachelor of science in personnel management. He was the city manager in Lake Wales for the past five years and has been employed in the past by the cities of Titusville and St. Petersburg. Mitchell is 53, married and has grown children, has a bachelor's degree and has completed some post graduate work in public administration. He has been city manager of Mulberry since 1977 and earlier experience has been city managers of Ipswich, Mass., Haines City and Lake Alfred, borough manager of Holidaysburg, Pa., city manager of Newburgh, N.Y., township manager of Marple, Pa. and assistant city manager in Culver City, Cal.

and would not be a "retired Army colonel whose only qualifications is command of an LMD." "What's an LMD," Dr. Larson asked. "That's a Large Mahogany Desk."

The city commission started looking for a new city manager "the first part of September, shortly after Robert Sanders resigned the post to move to Key West."

Advertisements placed in the ICMA Journal set a deadline for applications of Oct. 9 but this was the first chance the commissioners have had to meet and discuss the selection. Dr. Larson began the discussion by telling the commissioners he had not only taught college level courses in state and local government, he has been in on the writing of charters for seven cities in the state and was, a few months ago, chairman of a citizens' committee to choose a new city manager for the City of Boca Raton.

A number of the parameters in the profile agreed upon by the commissioners, after Larson left, were specifically suggested by him, including the admonition to be wary of retired military officers and corporate executives.

Larson also suggested, and the commissioners stressed during later discussion that no one of the guidelines stipulated in the profile could or should be a reason to exclude anyone.

by the commission Monday night, he would simply reply that the money hadn't been sent by them.

In a discussion with Sigmon and Williams, later Tuesday, both agreed the $100 hadn't come from Ms. Russell. They said they had decided to pay the bill after a telephone conversation with Mrs. Sanders, during which, she asked Sigmon if he was going to pay it.

"I don't feel I owed it," Sigmon said. "I told them at the time they were wrong in ordering the breakfast and charging it to the city and I thought they'd get in trouble over it."

He and Williams said they decided to pay the money, with Williams contributing $80 and Sigmon $20, because they both wanted to hold down friction for friends. They also said they believed after their conversation with Mrs. Sanders that she wanted Sigmon to pay the bill.

"I think now," Sigmon said, "that I was set up. I think both of us (he and Williams) were set up."

He went on to say that part of the problem is that, although he and Sanders have been close friends for a number of years, he angered Sanders recently when Sanders telephoned him to verify the fact of former Public Utilities Director Kenneth Retterer's resignation.

Sigmon said when he confirmed Retterer's resignation, Sanders told him, "Good. Now's the time for you to quit. That'll really screw 'em up. That's what they deserve."

"I told him I didn't intend to resign," he said, "and after he'd argued with me for awhile, he told me, 'Well, that's the end of our friendship,' and, 'I'm going to have your job no matter what it takes.'"

"I guess this is the end of our friendship," he said. "I guess Anthony and I were both set up."

During the discussion Monday night, Baker informed the commissioners he understood from the evidence he had at the time, which included the bill, that at least five laws had been violated, including forgery, which is a third degree felony.

Mayor Altman and Commissioners Claude Tindall and Charles Goodlett agreed they didn't want, at that time, to turn the evidence over to criminal court.

Altman made it clear, however, that he believed a part of the restitution would be a statement that Mrs. Sanders had signed the bill. He said Tuesday evening, after hearing that Williams and Sigmon had given the money to Anderson, that he wasn't sure restitution had been made.

He said he wasn't sure either, whether the city should accept the money from Sigmon and Williams.

Any action on the matter was postponed Monday night until a workshop scheduled for next Monday evening, when Anderson is supposed to report on the reason Mrs. Sanders sent the $100 to him.

Later in the meeting, Baker told the commissioners he had been asked by Sanders during a telephone conversation last Tuesday night for a determination on the ongoing investigation of his files, ordered about six weeks ago when Altman brought up several incidents he said indicated Sanders had been influencing commission decisions by withholding information or supplying wrong information.

Sanders, who has consistently denied any wrongdoing on his part, requested the commission to decide whether:

- The investigation was incomplete.
- The investigation was complete and the commission intends to take no action because nothing wrong was found in his records; or
- The investigation is complete and charges are to be filed.

Altman said the investigation is now "grossly incomplete" and he had no idea when it would be completed because Sanders' files are being checked on a part-time basis by City Clerk June Roglioli.

stration and five years in governmental management. The manager would be married, be working now within the State of Florida and would be a member of the International City Manager's Association (ICMA) and at least one other professional organization.

The ideal manager would also have solid budgetary skills, be a hard nosed leader but one who can get along with city employees, the commission and the public and would not be a "retired Army colonel whose only qualifications is command of an LMD."

"What's an LMD," Dr. Larson asked. "That's a Large Mahogany Desk."

Larson also suggested, and the commissioners stressed during later discussion that no one of the guidelines stipulated in the profile could or should be a reason to exclude anyone.

There is the possibility, for instance, that a successful applicant would have no college education at all but would have enough on-the-job experience to outweigh the educational requirement.

Decisions made on Saturday afternoon

Being a University of South Florida alumni and hence a USF sports fan, I begrudgingly switched on the Florida-Gator football game Saturday.

I would have rather watched USF football, but USF doesn't have a football team. Too bad, because I might have been a bruising 30-year-old, 160-pound All American full-back when I attended school several years ago. Don't let the spectacles fool you. A man has got to have his dreams.

Anyway, I tuned into the game being played in beautiful downtown Jacksonville, fully expecting to see Florida blown out of the Gator Bowl.

Sure enough, there was Herschel Walker running for a 72-yard TD before all my vacuum tubes could get warmed up.

Just when I was ready to give up and go outside to do something more exciting, like weeding around the hibiscuses, Florida had to go and get back into the game, kicking a field goal.

There I was — suspended between the game and the back yard most of the afternoon. Whenever Florida seemed down and out, the Gators would draw closer.

Gator teams are supposed to belly-up in the water when confronted with a top 10 team — specifically Gator teams with freshman quarterbacks.

Well, there was something about this year's Georgia team that turned up the best in the Gators. In the last quarter, Florida went ahead by a point, and Florida fans everywhere pinched themselves to see if they were dreaming.

Sure enough, Georgia being the better team, scored on a 39-yard drive down pass with about 1 1/2 minutes left in the game. Since the polls said the Bulldogs were number two in the country, I'm sure there was no luck only skill — involved in the play.

As a Gator-hater from way back, I just wanted to say that for once the University of Florida showed me a lot. Character is talked about, but this time I think Florida demonstrated it. Wait till next year, Georgia.

And speaking of Georgia, it seems that Jimmy Carter will soon be back in the Peach (Peanut?) State.

In the last few years, it hasn't always been easy to find a voter who would admit to having voted for Carter. I blame me. I voted for Jerry Ford, a son of an oft-repeated disclaimer as inflation and unemployment got out of hand.

Of course, if Ronald Reagan doesn't do any better, people will be saying in a few years, "Don't blame me, I voted for Jimmy Carter."

Even though Barry Goldwater and George McGovern threw in the towel after getting similarly trounced in presidential races, another politician got himself elected after an even more humiliating defeat. Richard Nixon couldn't get elected governor of California.

Who knows? Perhaps in four years we'll long for 20 percent inflation and $1.25 a gallon gasoline. A sobering thought.

For some reason, it seems that half the Mississippi State graduates in existence have chosen to make their homes in Florida.

They all came out of the woodwork after State defeated Alabama a couple of weekends ago.

It was rumored that a Glades Chapter of the Mississippi State Alumni Association would be founded and that Stark, Mississippi State's hometown, would be renamed Jubilation.

Election disappointment

One of the messages of the election of 1980 was that Americans wanted a change and they wanted a change that would hurt them least in the pocketbook.

As a result, there was a massive housecleaning as Democrats of national stature were sent home, and Republicans, who were perceived as being more tight-fisted and likely to restore the country's economy to good health were elected.

This message seemed to be echoed in Hendry County where voters rejected a one-cent gas tax which could have been used to build and maintain roads.

It is not surprising that this proposal was rejected, even though a one-cent hike seems to be the least of our inflation worries, especially in view of the tripling of gasoline prices in less than a decade.

What is surprising, however, is the rejection by Pioneer Plantation voters of a proposal to establish a drainage district. Rather than enjoying majority support, the proposal was overwhelmingly defeated.

The rejection of a drainage district at Pioneer Plantation is all the more surprising because many residents of that community asked for it following flooding which crept up to the door steps of some houses and made automobile transportation to some homesteads impossible for several days.

Following the flooding, elected county officials made on the site visits to the area. The only possible solution to the repeated flooding at Pioneer seemed to be in establishing a drainage district.

This area's legislative delegation was contacted and a special act approved in Tallahassee to set up the special taxing district.

In the meantime, county commissioners assisted the project by retaining a leading West Palm Beach drainage attorney to guide the district to its birth.

But Tuesday, the voters of Pioneer Plantation went to the polls, and the result was that the district was stillborn.

What the final resolution of the drainage problem will be is anyone's guess. But it is reasonable to assume that Pioneer will again face heavy rains and flooding.

County commissioners have steadfastly refused, and rightly so, to enter drainage matters for any area. Independent drainage districts have been established in the county. Residents of each district pay for the improvements which directly benefit them.

Had Pioneer approved a drainage district, it too could have begun the improvements necessary to sustain a desirable quality of life within the community. The failure of the referendum must be one of the major disappointments of the year for the people who worked so hard to bring it to pass.

Servicemen catch it again

Well, it looks as though the American serviceman gets it again in the neck.

It quickly became obvious the Susan B. Anthony metal (we refuse to say silver) dollar was a big flop with businessmen and citizens around the country when they started showing up in cashiers' tills around the country about a year ago.

So what happened to them?

Well, it seems servicemen serving on military bases and posts around the world aren't being paid off in dollar bills anymore. Susan B. Anthony has replaced George Washington.

There wouldn't be anything wrong with that if Susan B. would buy as much as George but, despite the best wishes of the feminists, Ms. Anthony just doesn't carry the clout of George.

In Germany, where women are reminded to busy themselves with children, kitchen and church, the United States Treasury Department's latest bon-doggle is only worth a single Deutchmark, compared to DM1.75 for the dollar bill.

But with the T-Men so anxious to get rid of all the Anthony dollars, they're withholding the portraits of President Washington and the servicemen are stuck with something worth just a tad more than half its face value.

There wouldn't be anything wrong with the situation if the servicemen had their choice in the matter but they don't. They're a captive audience for the funny money and that isn't so funny to the guys charged with the protection of this country.

Seems as though the T-Men would at least continue trying to pick on the American businessman. At least he'll get a dollar's value for Miss Susan. The Germans aren't so willing.

Keeping the memory alive

On this Veterans Day, we look to the nation's most recent veterans and to a project which seeks to honor them.

Today, only five years since the Americans left Vietnam, too few of us remember that 2.7 million of our young people served there over a 10-year span, sustaining casualties of 58,000 dead, 300,000 wounded and 75,000 disabled. Many more still carry profound psychological scars.

Last year, to honor the dedication and sacrifice of the Americans who served in Vietnam, a handful of Vietnam veterans formed the Vietnam Veterans Memorial Fund. The sole purpose of the fund is to establish a National Memorial in honor and recognition of the Americans who served and died. When the project is completed, the organization will go out of existence.

In an unbelievably short period of time the Fund has received congressional and Presidential approval of a resolution dedicating two acres of national parkland in Washington, D.C. as a site for the memorial.

But no government money will go into the design and construction of the memorial — that's the way the veterans want it. Private citizens, individual Americans, are contributing the funds.

The memorial will make no political statement about the war. Rather it is intended to be a symbol of national unity, of reconciliation. It will be located near the Lincoln Memorial, also a symbol of reconciliation after a divisive war.

Recently, the VVMF announced an open, nationwide competition to design the memorial.

A prestigious jury of experts in the arts and design professions will choose the winning design. The Fund's basic design principles call for a memorial that is reflective and contemplative in nature that will include the inscription of the names of all 57,661 Americans who died in the war.

So far, the Fund has raised about $500,000 of the estimated $3 million needed for the design and construction of the project. On this Veterans Day, we urge public support of this very special memorial.

Tax-deductible contributions may be sent to: The Vietnam Veterans Memorial Fund, Inc., P.O. Box 37240, Washington, D.C. 20013. The deposit and accounting of all gifts is conducted by an independent financial institution.

Bullish views on the election

I don't know for sure when it took place but I heard Monday about a cattle sale that should've taken place last Tuesday because it had to be about the biggest bunch of bull to come out of Immokalee in a while.

The "Who" was Warrior III and the "What" was the annual Barfield BeeMASTER sale but the astounding thing was the "How much" — and that was $400,000 for half interest in the year-old bull.

There wasn't any indication either about how much Warrior III weighed, but figure about 1,000 pounds and that works out to $800 a pound on the hoof.

That's enough to rival what you'd pay for a good T-bone down at the local meat market and on-the-hoof beef ain't supposed to cost that much.

Like I said, though, that's a lotta bull so it'd be a safe bet that the buyer was from Texas...and he was.

But if you think that's a lotta bull, I still don't think it matches what was coming over the airways and ads leading up to the election...and maybe not what's been happening since then.

Isn't it interesting, for instance, that about the time the referendum in Dade County that repeals the bi-lingualism resolution of seven years ago looked as though it might pass, that was about the time you started hearing talk the referendum may be unconstitutional?

Makes you wonder about the unconstitutional deprivation of rights of all those millions of people who immigrated into the country for the first 200 years...not to mention the same deprivation of rights of people who were here before the Mayflower.

There may not be anything in the constitution about English being the national language or even that there is such a thing as a national language but one thing's for sure.

Look at the problems countries with more than one language have, such as French Quebecois to the contrary, that isn't an anti-Cuban attitude because I feel the same way if St. Augustine had been made a bi-lingual city back when the Minoreans came into the area, speaking only their native French.

And despite some of the news stories to the contrary, that isn't an anti-Cuban attitude because I feel the same way if St. Augustine had been made a bi-lingual city back when the Minoreans came into the area, speaking only their native French.

There were some other referendums on the ballot with interesting results too though...the five amendments to the state constitution.

What I thought was so interesting was that of the five, only one failed to pass and it wasn't the one with the most opposition.

Personally I thought if any of 'em would fail, it would be looked to by Privacy proposal but it passed in spite of opposition.

I could be wrong but it looked to me as though the Florida voters may have done an about face on their traditional philosophy of voting against amendments if they weren't too sure about them.

The whole election night experience was something else though. This was the first time I've ever gone over to the election headquarters in West Palm Beach and it was something else in more ways than one. I looked to see how the press was gathered around for instance, had to come faster than any other concession I can remember. Jackie Winchester probably didn't think it was very funny but Carter's concession came before the first vote had been tabulated in Paj Beach County, never mind before the polls closed in California.

The one bright spot in Jackie's night was probably that she wasn't incited where the press was gathered around trying to find out what was happening locally. That was a madhouse.

I never realized how many reporters there are in this area. Matter of fact, one of the thoughts that kept going through my mind was, who the heck is manning the desks in the various city rooms in all the local newspapers and broadcast stations?

One thing about it, though, with all the standing before results started filtering in, and between updates, you just know you're gonna overhear some really class conversation, considering the number of professional journalists on the scene.

There was, for instance, the long exchange on swapping comic books as kids, updates on soap operas and the instant analysis of why Carter lost (which boiled down to the fact he'd led the nation in a rebirth and it wasn't a more fun than the first time around).

But the most memorable comment I can recall came out loud and clear in one of those moments when there were about a dozen conversations going on at once when all the other talking paused at once.

"The thing that bothered me," a baby-faced lass working for a local television station virtually shouted into the sudden vacuum, "is that my daughter will probably lose her virginity before I had my first kiss."

I'll never know what the conversation had been about in her little group but there was no question about what the whole mob was talking about after the dead silence and swiveling heads greeted her remark.

Didn't have a darned thing to do with politics.

Thoughts on the massive voter turnout

There was a 74 percent turnout in Hendry County for the November 4 general election. That was more than this county has had to handle in a long time, and it showed in the long lines at most voting places. From the grapevine at the Hendry County Courthouse, I hear that almost every line was as long as the one I stood in Tuesday.

Lines. Oh yes, they were long. The line I stood in at Jimmy Cochran's Scales was so long that we were all told it would take two hours before we got in to vote. Two hours. And I heard that some others were just as long.

It says something for the citizens of Hendry County that not one of the people standing in my line walked away out of impatience. They all wanted to vote, very badly. But what do you do when you have to spend two hours in a line?

I'll tell you, I didn't have a darn thing to do, but I did listen and watch, and here are some observations of what people do in lines.

I got to the polling place around 5 p.m. that day. When I had been there for 15 minutes, one woman came back to where I was from the front of the line, or at least close to the front, to talk with a woman just ahead of me. She said she had been there for an hour and a half, and that if the lady wanted to sit down there was a chair up yonder that was open. She said she just knew that the people around this lady wouldn't mind holding her place for her. The lady just smiled and said she'd stay in line, even though she was elderly and it would be a long time before she could sit down.

A group of men a little bit ahead of me in line were smoking and joking, not seeming to mind the long wait. It was like standing around at a party, I suppose, but they just didn't seem to care that they were standing out in the parking lot.

A group of older men and women behind me were also talking and laughing, talking about everything from the presidential election to their families. One man noted that at the last presidential election, the winner had been named over the television and radio stations before he had even gotten to a voting booth. I don't think anyone who heard that statement was too happy.

Around 6 p.m., someone from behind me quite a ways in the line, drove his car over to the side of the line and turned on the radio. Maybe nobody but myself appreciated this gesture, because soon the man turned off the radio because it was too noisy to hear it.

Even after it got dark, people kept coming, and very few left. One person noted that it took about ten minutes from the time someone disappeared into the building to vote to the time they reappeared to search for their cars smiling. Another voice said that there should be classes in the line to teach people how to use the finicky voting machines so it wouldn't take so long for people to vote — and so the people in line wouldn't have to wait so long.

Though more people kept coming, right up to 7 p.m., nobody left the line in disgust.

By the time I had almost reached the front of the line, a man a little way back shouted to a friend just at the door to the building, saying, "I'll give you a dollar for your place!" The guy by the door shouted back, "Man, I wouldn't take 10 for it!"

There was a general air of expectation and excitement in that line. And when I finally came out of the building, having fought with the voting machine, I breathed a sigh of relief and was amazed to look up through was even longer than when I had entered it. It was 7 p.m., and no more people would be allowed to enter the line. But Hendry County had a 74 percent turnout. Wow.

Amy Liebmann
First Impressions

On a different note, don't let anyone tell you that football isn't a rough sport. You guessed it. I got schmucked last Friday, right there for everyone to see!

I have to thank everyone who came over to me to see if I was all right. I was fine, and my camera was soon put back together and also worked fine. But I was just plain chicken. I didn't have the courage to step back on that field. Maybe it had to do with something one concerned woman had told me. She said something like now I was a real citizen of LaBelle. Well, perhaps I took that to mean that every football game I attend brings me closer to becoming a permanent resident of this town!

United Way Agency honors Stapp

Palm Beach County United Way Executive Director Dino Caras said this week the 1980 United Way fund raising campaign in the Glades was a success, largely because of the efforts of people and organizations who donated their time and effort here.

"Our theme this year," Caras said, "was 'We Can Work Together' and it was the extra special effort by Dale Stapp of Florida Power & Light. Bob White of Southern Bell and Terry Lino of Quaker Oats that made it all possible.

"There are many supporters of the Glades area United Way," he said, "individuals who help by giving their own time, talent and money. Charles Trammel, Dr. Luis Guerrero, Sud Barton, Tricia Blash, Irida Ruiz, Otto Larson, John Gillies, Bob Turner, Horace Harris, E.A. Wolfe, Frank Teets, Mrs. Ruth Wedgworth and many others."

In the United States each day, approximately 5,000 people turn 65.

Caras said the support provided by the individuals, and corporations located in the Glades, support through their efforts services from a variety of organizations such as the Red Cross, Scouts, Visiting Nurses, Crippled and Retarded Children, Wee Care, Mental Health, YMCA, Care-A-Wan, Children's Home Society, Crisis Line and Kidney Dialysis.

He said the Glades organizations included Quaker Oats, the City of Belle Glade, the U.S. Post Office in Belle Glade and Pahokee, the West Area School System, United States Sugar Corporation,

What You Should Know About Chronic Pain

- Any pain that persists longer than 6 months is a chronic pain. Thirty million Americans suffer with that kind of serious pain in various areas of the body. Most of these unfortunate people will continue to suffer needlessly because they don't realize how effective chiropractic care is for chronic pain.

Statistics show that about nine million Americans do go to a chiropractor each year, primarily for relief from pain. Insurance statistics prove that a substantial percentage of these people receive the relief that they had been unable to find through other health care methods.

Chronic pain can strike virtually any area of the body, resulting in such conditions as: recurring headaches, sinus pain, low back pain, neck pain, arm and shoulder pain, chest pain, abdominal pain, sciatica, neuritis, arthritis, bursitis, and many other conditions.

Since all pain is transmitted through the nervous system... and because the chiropractor is specially trained in dealing with problems of the spine and nervous system, chiropractic care is often effective in relieving chronic pain.

If you or anyone in your family, suffer with chronic pain, simple and painless chiropractic screening tests can quickly indicate whether or not your pain is likely to respond to chiropractic care. Some people respond to chiropractic care, some do not. You'll never know for sure until you try. If you would like to find out if chiropractic can help you, call today for an appointment.

FROSTPROOF wide receiver Mike Barnett pulls in a long bomb near the Gator goal line. Luckily for the Gators, the referee ruled the pass was caught out of bounds. The Gators won the game 25-8.

Frostproof falls to Glades Day, Gators remain unbeaten

It was the weekend of the Gator and the Bulldog. In Jacksonville, the University of Georgia Bulldogs clinched a last minutes victory over the Florida Gators, but the scenario was reversed in Frostproof where the second ranked Glades Day Gators defeated the Frostproof Bulldogs 25-8.

The Gators literally ran all over the Bulldogs, piling up 333 yards on the ground with running back Tobin Vancovsky accounting for 132 of the total.

The Gators began their running attack on their first possession after returning a Frostproof punt to their own 36-yard line. On the next set of downs Glades Day moved near midfield and then quarterback Nacho Bueno carried the ball on a keeper down to the Bulldog 37. Bueno's attempt at quick-scoring bomb was unsuccessful and the Gators went back to the ground assault.

Vancovsky broke loose on his first of several big gains of the night and scrambled through the Bulldog secondary to the line. Fullback Jason Shelton carried the ball around the left and on the next play for the Gators first score, however, Gary Herick missed the PAT.

The Gators wasted no time in getting the pigskin back and on the second play from scrimmage, Vancovsky again exploded across the line, dodging the bulldog defenders on a 45-yard run that put the Gators in scoring position again at the Frostproof 15-yard line.

After pushing to the seven, Bueno hit receiver Tommy Wilson in the end zone for the second Gator touchdown. Herick again missed the PAT, giving the Gators a 12-0 lead.

The Bulldogs, who had only 103 total offensive yards during the game, could not move the ball and had to punt deep in their own territory. Glades Day took over on the Bulldog 40. Bueno handed off to Shelton who bulled his way for nine yards to the 31, but got an extra fifteen yards tacked on when Frostproof was penalized on a facemasking call. On the ensuing play the Bulldogs threatening to score on the 11, after running only one play, Vancovsky then took it on the next play, giving the Gators an 18-0 lead. Shelton missed the PAT.

After exchanging punts the Gators seemed as if they were going to widen the gap. The Gators intercepted quarterback secondary, Matthew Johnston on the Bulldog 30 and running back Julio Rivas carried the ball 22. Vancovsky followed with a run to the 15.

However, Bueno fumbled on the 15 and the Bulldogs jumped on it, temporarily holding the Gator offense.

Frostproof failed to take advantage of the turnover and ended up losing ten yards on a quarterback sack and punt.

The Gators returned the punt to the Bulldog 33, pushed to the 29 and then Vancovsky sprinted to the 17, when Bueno, who only passed for 8 yards during the game was intercepted at the goal line by Bulldog defensive back Mike Barnett, who returned the ball to the 20.

Johnston went for broke on the next play, trying to find Barnett deep in Gator territory, but the pass went incomplete off Barnett's fingertips.

GDS held Frostproof but after returning the punt to the Gator 26 and subsequently advancing into bulldog territory, Vancovsky fumbled at the Frostproof 49. Johnston quickly capitalized on the Gator's second turnover, hitting Barnett on a cross pattern at the Gator 24.

Johnston went right back to the air and split the seam in the Gator secondary for a fifteen yard completion to Barnett at the Gator nine. On the next play the Bulldogs got a break when the Gators were called for pass interference, setting up a first and goal at the three for Frostproof.

Two plays later Johnston had Barnett open in the end zone when Shelton leaped up and made a one-handed interception, preserving the 18 point lead.

The Gators quickly marched back upfield, shelton carried for 18 yards to the 42. Vancovsky tackled on another eight to put the Gators at midfield and after several short yardage plays and two penalties, Rivas punched his way through the Bulldog defensive line to the

21. Bueno then scrambled around end for eighteen yards to the three and Shelton took it the remaining distance on the next play to give the Gators a 25-0 lead.

Gator Head Coach Byron Walker, then put back-up quarterback Scott Messteth in along with most of the Gator second team. The Gators held Frostproof to virtually no yardage in the fourth quarter but an unnecessary roughness call gave the Bulldogs good field position at the Gator 36 with four minutes remaining in the game.

After missing on two pass attempts Johnston scrambled for 19 yards to the Gator 17 and on the next play hit Barnett on a seven yard reception and then got possession inside the ten on a penalty.

Johnston then took the ball in himself for the Bulldog's only score of the night. The two-point conversion attempt was good, with Johnston hitting Eddie Smith in a corner of the end zone.

Frostproof tried an onside kick following their score but the Gators quickly fell on the ball, giving the Gators their eighth straight victory against no defeats.

The Gators will play district rival Moore Haven next Friday in Moore Haven at 8 p.m.

Overtime defeat sours Raider homecoming

BELLE GLADE- Glades Central's Raiders took an early lead Friday night in a preview of Region 4AAA championship football play but Westwood came back to tie the game with minutes left and win it easily in overtime.

Playing their third game without Bain, who was only played by coach Ben McCoy on kickoff returns, the Raiders still managed to make it look easy in the first half, largely on the passing of quarterback Jacob Rhames.

But dominant as they were in the first half, Westwood's Panthers held the Glades Central team to 23 yards on the ground and 177 yards in the air and the Panthers controlled the second half play and managed to capitalize on a Raider fumble to put the game into overtime late in the fourth period.

The Raiders' first score was set up midway through the first quarter after a Glades Central drive was stopped at the Westwood 44 and punt gave the ball to the Panthers on their own three.

The Glades Central defense held the Panthers to four yards on their first series of plays and when Westwood punted out from their seven, Jessie "Jet" Hester picked off the ball on the Westwood 40 and sprinted all the way into the end zone.

The kick was a good lead with 7:38 left in the first period. It looked as though the Raiders were on their way to another score when Westwood fumbled the ball in their own territory on the first play from scrimmage after the ensuing kickoff but they were shoved back to their own Westwood 33 to their own 47 on two sacks behind the line of scrimmage, then a blocked punt on the Glades Central 23 put the Panthers in prime position to score.

The Panthers were able to pick up one first down and penetrated to the Glades Central 8 yard line before the Raider defense held on fourth and goal. The Panthers kicked a field goal, however, and the score was 6-3 with 2:33 left in the period.

Glades Central bounded back, though, and took only four plays to move the ball 68 yards to score. Taking the ball on the 32, Randy Rutledge picked up six yards up the middle before Rhames took to the air, connecting with Hester to the 39, with Greg Hall to the Westwood 33 and scored on a pass to Ray McDonald from 33 yards out. Rhames kicked the extra point and the Raiders led, 13-3 with 0:39 left in the first period but that was all the points they would make in the game.

The next time the Raiders got their hands on the ball, it was on a Westwood punt to their 11. Rutledge took the ball out to the 28 and a first down. Two plays later, Rhames hit Hall at the Glades Central 48 and hit him again two plays later at the Westwood 38 but flags on three consecutive plays pushed the ball back to the Glades Central 22, whence a punt brought it back to the Raider 43, setting up the Panthers' second field goal five plays later from the Raider 7, closing the score to 13-6 with 4:58 to go in the half.

With several of the 1981 team members on the sideline, J.P. "DODO" Parker, Hub Spooner, Louis Hub, Leon "er" Spooner and John Padgett, the 1980 Devils crushed the Warriors 30 to zip.

Junior Bernard Johnson started the game rolling for the Devils when he carried the ball on the opening kick-off with a 16 yard run. During the next series of play Lee Power ran for a touch down, but was called back, but on the next play Powell ran for 69 yards for the Devils first score of the game with 8:27 remaining in the first quarter.

The Devils 4-4 in the Suncoast West, recovered a Jupiter fumble at the 40

The Devils 4-4 in the Suncoast West, recovered a Jupiter fumble at the 40

and immediately got the ball back. On the Devils first play after the fumble recovery, senior quarterback Boris Banks threw a 4-yard touchdown pass to senior Andre Cooper. The conversion kicked failed for the second time and the Devils led 12-0 with 7:30 remaining in the first half.

The Blue Devils' 2-3 in conference play, playing at their best so far this season pushed their lead even higher over the Warriors' tailback Michael Rawls run for the Devils third touchdown moving the games out of reach of the Warriors.

The Devils third extra point attempt failed but the Devils had a solid 18-0 lead over Jupiter. The Devils practically assured of adding to Coach Russell's string of victories at Pahokee, the Devils added two more touchdowns in the fourth quarter.

Friday's win gives Coach Russell an 83-18 won and lost record at the local high school since 1972.

Senior Albert Gray, on a 19-yard touchdown reverse added more numbers to the score board, and the visiting 1930-31 Blue Devil team had much to smile about in the stands as the Devils took a 24-0 lead over the Warriors.

Jupiter who fell to 1-7 in overall standings this year, with only minutes left in the game still had not seen the last of the Devils on pay dirt.

Ross captured the last score of the game as the Devils went on to win a solid victory, 30-0.

The Devils play Miami Face Friday and meet the Glades Central Raiders on Nov. 21.

BELLE GLADE- Coming off a two year lapse, the 14th annual Regatta sponsored by the Belle Glade Chamber of Commerce and the Boat Racing Club of the Palm Beach County was well attended by local and out of town regatta fans although Sunday's weather was filled with an overcast sky.

Approximately 50 boats, ranging in sizes from pint sized outboards to large, fast inboard hydroplanes shattered the rim canal Sunday afternoon with a father and son taking the top honors in the second 30 minute marathon held. Edward V. Hauptner, the father, of Lake Park raced in the SD competition and his son, Mark, of Palm Beach Shores raced in the SG competition. Both men won their races handsily.

Big plays ruin CDS chances for winning season

BELLE GLADE - A desperation pass and another one that didn't ruin the Christian Day School football team's chances for their first-ever winning season in a 21-14 heart-breaker with St. Edwards Vero Beach.

With time running out on the ball game, St. Edwards quarterback Eric Barkett dropped back from the scrimmage line at the Christian Day 34 on a fourth and six situation, came close to being sacked by Crusaders but managed to get off a long pass.

Two Christian Day defenders chased the pass into the end zone and when one yelled, "Don't catch it in the end zone," Vero Beach receiver Richard Allen slipped in to snag the winning pass on a post pattern. Richard Ames kicked the extra point and St. Edwards led the Crusaders, 21-14 with 2:58 left on the game clock.

Christian Day was still almost able to pull the ball back to the St. Edwards 11 with time for two plays left but the next play was batted down by a defender and the second, on the last play of the game, was dropped by Jimmy Hager in the end zone.

Had the Crusaders won the game, it could have meant, with a win against Broward Christian this Saturday (to be played at 2 p.m.) there'd be a 6-4 season for the young Crusaders which would be their first winning season.

"The big play hurt us," CDS coach, Gus Harmon said, "but I was proud of the boys. They fought back and they never gave up, not even when St. Edwards scored on that long pass play."

St. Edwards opened the scoring with a 68 yard drive in nine plays, with Barkett going over from one yard out and 7:49 left in the first quarter. Ames kicked the extra point to give them a 7-0 lead.

Two series later, Christian Day gave St. Edwards its second scoring opportunity of the game when Morales threw an intercepted pass to Tommy Dobis at the St. Edwards 37 and Dobis returned it 54 yards before being hauled down at the Crusader 7.

St. Edwards punched the ball over three plays later and Ames' second kick of the day gave St. Edwards a 14-0 lead.

Christian Day took over the game's momentum minutes later when the Crusaders punted out to their own 45 yard line, the St. Edwards receiver dropped the ball and Tony Duboy fell on it.

Christian Day mounted a 56 yard drive, highlighted by double screen passes from quarterback Alex Morales to Ronnie Cameron and look-ins to Hager, along with a couple of running plays by Kent Davis and Cameron, before Cameron scored from one yard out with 10 seconds left in the second quarter. The try for extra point failed and the Crusaders went into the half trailing, 14-6.

In the opening series of the third quarter, the Crusaders drove from their own 26 yard line to the St. Edwards 36 before a penalty and a quarterback sack forced them to punt.

After holding Vero Beach for three downs, the Crusaders received another punt on their own 36 and mounted a 12-play, 64 yard drive to paydirt.

The key play was a 39 yard pass from Morales to Duboy down to the St. Edwards one. Once again, Cameron plunged over from the one. Morales connected with Duboy for two extra points and the game started all over again with a 14-14 tie and 7:49 left in the third quarter.

The Crusaders led St. Edwards in every statistic that mattered... except the score, outstriking them, 103-88 yards and outpacing them, 126-125 yards.

Morales was responsible for all the aerial yardage as well as rushing for another 28 yards. Cameron was the leading rusher, picking up 42 yards on the ground, with another 23 added by Davis.

Morales also led the CDS defense, making ten tackles. Six Crusaders made eight tackles each. They were Duboy, Davis, Gene Bair, Scott Hudson, Cameron and Cary McKee.

Cameron picked off one interception and Duboy and David Dishman each recovered a fumble.

It's back to basics for catching bass

Don Simunek

A full moon the previous evening without excessive cloud cover usually spells "lock-jaw bass" for the following day. Considering most bass will gobble up everything in sight during the bright moonlit hours of the night, our fishing guide, Lance Glaser at Slim's Fish Camp in Belle Glade, didn't hesitate in the least to tell us that the only way to stand a half-way decent chance of putting fish in the boat is to use live shiners.

Since my wife Kathy was about to go on her first real bassin' excursion on the big lake, it seemed only fitting that we resort back to the basics of live-bait fishing. My main concern was certainly not to

Hunter killed in accident

SOUTH BAY - A Miramar resident, hunting on a halftrack with his brother and three friends, died Monday afternoon when his 12 gauge shotgun accidentally discharged and shot him in the chest.

Dead was James Doyle, 23, according to a report by Sheriff's Detective Ted Keys, who said Doyle had been hunting with his brother, Danny and three friends in the Holy Land south of US 27. Monday was the first day of hunting season.

Keys said the shotgun was in its rack in the halftrack when it discharged, the load striking Doyle in the chest. Doyle's companions took him to a check-in station and a Game and Fresh Water Fish Commission agent called for a sheriff's helicopter, which transported Doyle, who had died in the meantime, to Glades General Hospital.

AUTHOR'S WIFE, Kathy Simunek catches her first Lake Okeechobee bass on shiners with Pro Guide Lance Glaser from Slim's Fish Camp in Belle Glade.

show her how accurate Lance and I can be in our casting ability, but to provide a fun, enjoyable trip of catching bass the easy way and to spark a flame which could very well last a lifetime for this great inland rod and reel family sport.

We five dozen frisky little four-inch shiners, we took off in Hershel Snyder's Pro Cajun Bass Boat (Hershel owns the Slim's), and proceeded west through the rim canal directly into this vast section of open water known as Pelican Bay. Heading toward the distant shoreline called Grassy Island, the area is loaded with large isolated patches of peppergrass beds measuring close to 75 yards in diameter. Big "gorilla-sized" bass which Lance, our Hawaiian national bass fishing champ... Ooooo! I mean "champ"... often refers, swim around the outskirts of the beds in search of small gizzard shad, bream and shiners.

Maintaining a positive mental outlook, we dropped anchor 15 yards off the southeastern section of a big peppergrass bed. The reason Lance decided to choose this particular section was because a light breeze was coming out of the southeast, and in turn, our delectable little live baits would be more inclined to swim into the weedy cover where resident "gorilla-sized" bass often feed.

A stiff, gutty five-and-one-half to six-foot spinning or bait-casting rod teamed with a white spray painted cork bobber set three-and-one-half to four feet above a size 2/0 English Bend, bronze hook with 20-pound test line completes the terminal rig. Most experienced shiner fishermen will hook the bait through the bottom lip and out through the top nostril so when a lunger decides to engulf its prey, obviously it has to go head-first, and the hook will then achieve its deepest mouth penetration. Once the bobber starts to move off to one side and your heart suddenly gets stuck in your throat in eager anticipation, then it's time to tighten up on your line and, as the bobber finally goes under, say to yourself, "I'm gonna break this rod in half as you send her hook home."

Only 10 minutes elapsed before the bobber tied to the opposite end of Kathy's fishing rod began to nervously cruise in the direction of the peppergrass. "Okay, now reel in the slack line and get ready to set the hook," said Lance. Unfortunately, Kathy's lack of experience of snapping back with the rod made her lose the first fish. But the second time around, she pulled back with authority and boated a plump little two-pounder. Suddenly, that cute, girlish grin coming from the corners of her mouth told me the whole story as she probably said to herself, "Gee... this must be easy... even I can do it!"

Once Kathy broke the ice with her first fish, she scored with a second largemouth which tipped the scales at three-and-a-half pounds. From then on, it was like she had been fishing with shiners all of her life. After three hours of early morning angling on the peppergrass beds along the east side of Grassy Island, we landed 11 bass up to five-and-a-half pounds and were more than pleased with the turn of events.

Truly, what happened to make this trip so enjoyable was Lance Glaser's good, easy-going personality. At the age of 32, Lance has been just about everywhere in the United States... as well as being from his home state of Hawaii... and has wet a line for just about every fish that swims. Surely anyone when the fish are biting, but when the going is slow and the fish seem to be in hibernation, it takes a guide with a cheerful, lively personality to keep things on an entertaining note.

Good Luck and Tight Lines!

Raiders

defense took, the Raider offense gave back later when a Jacob Rhames pass was intercepted on the Glades Central 23 yard line three plays later to set up the Panthers' tying score.

Four plays later, the Panthers scored their first touchdown of the night on a nine yard TD aerial. The kick was good and it was a new ball game with 5:47 left in the game.

You should insulate your hot water heater if it is located in a room that isn't used for living.

The Raiders started moving the ball upfield from the following kickoff but a Rhames pass meant for Hester was picked off by a Panther at the Westwood 40 with 2:01 left in the game.

Neither team was available to move the ball convincingly during the final two minutes of regular time although Rhames was one for two passes in the final 15 seconds, connecting to Hester at the Westwood 37 from his own 49.

The Raiders won the coin toss to begin the overtime, taking the ball on the Westwood 10 yard line. Rutledge made no gain from scrimmage in the first play from scrimmage, an attempted pass from Rhames to McCoy was no good on second down and a third down pass to Hester was intercepted, stopping the Raiders.

Westwood scored in two running plays, reaching first the six yard line and then the four, taking a six point lead and a 19-13 win.

The Raiders are idle this week and face Pahokee Nov. 21 before meeting Westwood again on Nov. 28 in the Regional playoff.

TAKING IT FROM THE TOP

By REV. DAVID T. EVANS
Everglades Presbyterian Church

During the last two elections there has been a tendency to take aim against big government. During the last decade there has been a quiet revolution against the mainline churches. People have been going to the more conservative churches or not going at all. Many people have just become passive about organized religion. This passivity has been turned against God because in the minds of many God has been replaced.

All of this points to a kind of rebellion that is going on in America. There have been various forms of rebellion throughout the history of mankind. Much of this desire or compulsion to oppose comes from a lack of internal peace.

The unpeaceful condition of man is caused by the rebellious relationship with God which in turn causes an uproar within self and hostility toward others.

The Apostle Paul wrote to the Corinthians "God was in Christ reconciling the world to Himself, not longer holding men's misdeeds against them and He has entrusted us with the message of reconciliation."

God has in Jesus Christ provided for the bringing of people, the world, you and me back into a peaceful relationship. Through Christ our sins are no longer counted against us, and to complete the circle we have been given the task of spreading the message and attitude of God to others.

In reality each of us has been entrusted with the work or the ministry of reconciliation. Each Christian has been reconciled through Christ's forgiving love and act and therefore is appointed an ambassador for Christ.

The point is that we are given forgiveness, for our sins are paid for by Christ. By this redeeming act we are reconciled to God because our sins no longer separate us from God. Having participated in this reconciliation we are made carriers of this wonderful message for and to others.

The ministry of reconciliation is not given only to ordained ministers but to all believers. Indeed each church is to be a whole group of ambassadors for Christ. This is the only way that Christ's message can be carried effectively — through the words and lives of Christians.

Scott, Jose Figueroa, Ethingor Warren, Claudia Salazar, Criseldo Garza and Robert Tristan. The students appeared in the Glades Central Community School homecoming parade on last Friday.

Pahokee commercial, home garbage rates rise

BY ALMA HENRY
PAHOKEE—The Pahokee City Council Tuesday night approved garbage rate hikes for commercial and residential users.

On the recommendation of Donnie Martin, Director of Public Works, the Council agreed to charge $8.50 for two day a week pick up for residential users and $25 per 300 gallon container for commercial users on the no day a week pick up system and $75 per 300 gallon container for commercial users on the six day a week pick up plan.

"With the city's present garbage rate system, the residents are subsidizing the commercial customers and that's not fair," said Martin.

"Commercial customers should start paying their fair share, equal or above what the residents are paying," Martin added.

With Mayor Norma Norman and Councilman George Rashley absent, John Mock, was the only Councilman against the hike.

In a motion that failed for a lack of the two-third necessary votes, Mock voted for a $20 and $60 hike for commercial rates.

In defining what commercial rates are, Martin presented to the city a presentation stating "commercial customers shall be identified as, but not limited to all office buildings, stores, filling stations, service establishments, light industry, schools clubs, lodges, motels, laundries, hotels, public buildings, food service and lodging establishments and any other activity not primarily residential."

With the present system of charging customers, Martin said the size of the container used established whether the customers were charged residential or commercial rates.

"With the present system, two businesses next door in the same line of services could have been billed differently, he said, "one could have been billed commercial and the other residential," Martin added.

Although Martin included churches in his definition as a commercial customer, the Council unanimously agreed to exempt churches from paying garbage pick-up fees.

W. E. McKinstry, chairman of the Council said presently there were several churches exempted from paying garbage pickup fees, and not to be discriminatory. Churches should be exempted.

Although the City Council decided to increase the rates, the Council is still unsure what course it will take in regards to remaining in the garbage business

On Nov. 15, the Solid Waste Authority will close the Pahokee dump.

Several weeks ago Ed Lahey, a spokesman for Automatic System, Inc., a sanitation company, negotiated with the city to take over its garbage and trash collection system. The Council apparently not entirely satisfied with the term of the contract agreed to continue with the operation the city already has.

In other business the city approved a request by Mrs. J. Jones, chairman of the library board to approve the contracts to remain a part of the county library system.

Mrs. Jones explained to the Council that to remain a part of the system local residents living outside of the city limits could be charged the library without imposing a fee and city residents could use the county library in West Palm Beach without paying a fee.

Mrs. Jones also said the Louisa V. York Library could purchase books at a discount rate through the county system, and would be eligible for other services offered by the county library and other libraries, of various cities which are members of the county system.

The Council approved the purchase of a generator by Jim Ushers.

Agreed to sale old garbage containers for $35. Approved a proposal by the city consulting engineer James Sloane, to improve the harbor at a cost of approximately $40,000.

The new harbor improvement project ac-ording to Sloane will include a new floating dock, boardwalk, outdoor theatre and various other facilities.

Sloane told the Council the only thing hindering the project's progress at the present is the Title Opinion and a resolution from the Bond Council.

Michael Stauder the city attorney said the Title Opinion will be completed in the next several days.

Sloane urged the Council to contact the Farmers Home Administration and urge them to complete the necessary paper work before Dec. 15.

Sloane said the cost of materials are going up and the company who received the bid to do the job is threatening to increase the bid cost of the project if work is not started soon.

The City also agreed to continue working with Oscar Manuel in collect payment for properties sold to Manuel.

Authorized the Police Department to do whatever is necessary to curb truckers from parking across in front of the Pahokee Chamber of Commerce.

ACE is educational high card

By DEAN JONES

BELLE GLADE—An educational high card is now held by the Christian Academy at the Apostolic Church of Jesus Christ, pastor J.P. Feld told Belle Glade Rotarians Thursday.

Feld said the ACE (Accelerated Christian Education) program employed at the Academy is about ten years old and is installed in an average of seven new schools a week, with the materials being recycled and used in schools all over the free world.

The program, according to a slide presentation Feld showed the Rotarians, not only provides a better education but is a "washed by God" and country-oriented, stressing black and white values rather than the philosophy that good and bad values come in shades of gray.

The school at Feld's church was opened this term and he said plans call for the eventual installation of an educational program from kindergarten through two years of college in a building complex to be constructed behind the existing church building on West Canal Street South.

The ACE program, according to Feld and the slide presentation, differs from the traditional public school concept in several ways.

One of the greatest differences is that each student studies at his or her own rate of speed and each student has a career in the "learning center," with communications cut off to anybody but the instructors.

The presentation noted that in "normal" schools, students travel through their school years along with their class and if they don't learn the material, they're socially promoted.

"Time is the constant in this situation and learning is the variable," the presentation said, "but (in the ACE), time is the variable and learning is the constant."

Feld said each student sets learning goals for each day and may be held after normal class hours if the goals aren't met. If the goals still are not met, he said, they will take the remaining work home with them as homework.

"We finished our first quarter last week," Feld said, "and we'll be sending out progress reports next week (this week). The average grade for the 90 students is 90 percent."

ACE employs five "laws" of learning, including the application of prescribed levels of learning for the individual students, goals of learning, controls and motivation, a measurement of learning and rewards for a student's accomplishments.

Feld noted that education in America originally was conducted in churches and was gradually taken over by the state. Where the state is failing, he said, the founders of the ACE program believe Bible-oriented churches through the nation can succeed.

Feld said the program also enhances the togetherness of the family unit by hiring men and women teachers who work in teams, obviously in "father and mother roles."

"We're watching the breakdown of the family in America," Feld told the Rotarians. "One indication is the rise of juvenile delinquency." He said he believes, also, that the breakdown is no accident, that it's the result of a deliberate effort.

He said he believes a Christian education is the answer to that breakdown.

Feld said the plans for the school call for 34,000 square feet of floor space, which will include a circular learning center with upstairs classrooms for junior college level courses, a cafeteria, a swimming pool and other facilities.

Buying a used boat

Last week we dealt with what to look for when purchasing a new boat. This week we deal with used or pre-owned boats. Many of the things one looks for in buying a new boat apply when looking at used boats. The difference is that by the time you look at a used boat, original faults are more obvious. The real trick in buying real value for your money in a used boat is to check out points that are not so obvious.

Where has the boat been stored? Covered and enclosed storage is best. If stored exposed, look for signs of expanded seams, splits at fastenings, braces and joints. Check carefully for rust and corrosion, including the power plant.

Has the boat been used in fresh or saltwater, or both. If in salt, look for electrolysis damage to metal hulls and all exterior metal parts, including rivets and screws. Since most used boats already have a power plant check out the lower unit for corrosion and also electrolysis. A general rule is that boats that have been used in fresh water only sell for 20 to 30 percent more than those used in the salt.

Examine the hull carefully for a "hook". This is a dread ailment that can afflict an otherwise sound hull. It is an unwanted curve, usually concave, in the bottom centerline of the boat resulting from improper support during storage. Using the wrong trailer is one of the more probable causes of this. In buying a small boat that has been in storage for a great length of time look for one that has been stored bottom up and covered.

Check out the condition of hull fastenings and hardware. They can tell a tale. Too many loose rivets and screws indicate that the hull has taken too much stress and perhaps abuse. It is also an indication of little or no maintenance.

We cannot emphasize enough the importance of carefully checking the transom. Original construction weakness and careless or stressful use will show up immediately. Ensure that the joints with the sides and the bottom are sound. If there are signs of cracking, splits and separation you may want to think twice before purchasing such a boat. Where transom pads are used make sure a deteriorated one can be replaced without damaging the boat.

Look for pitted surfaces on an aluminum hull. Their presence indicates electrolysis. Don't buy that boat. On the other hand small dents or a few broken rivets means little. Dents can be knocked out and a few rivets restored. Beware of loose rivets all over. They just cannot be effectively repaired. The holes are generally too wide for re-riveting.

Crazing on the surface of a fiberglass boat's gel coat may tell its age but has little or no effect on the quality of the hull. The use of a good quality fiberglass restorer and some old fashioned elbow grease will do wonders for this particular condition. Cracks,

AROUND THE BIG "O"

Lorne Racicot

however, can be serious. Look carefully for signs of delamination at the transom, joints and bow on fiberglass boats. If really serious, it's difficult to restore and you might be better advised to look elsewhere for a craft.

Inspect the inside of the hull. In the point of the bow, at transom corners, and under floorboards (if present) for signs of collision damage. If such evidence is present have the repairs well done. Look for signs of leaking around them. Actually, they should be sounder and tighter than the rest of the hull.

Don't pass up a used boat just because it has a hole punched in it. If no additional damage is present and the hull is in otherwise good condition, a simple hole, even a large one, might easily be repaired. This may result in a real bargain to you. Aluminum and fiberglass hulls are not all that difficult to patch.

If a used boat costs several thousand dollars, as most do on today's market, you may be well advised to obtain the services of an expert to go over the hull. He can find things you wouldn't even think about. He can also advise you the extent and probable cost of any repairs or replacements that are necessary.

As previously stated, most used rigs already have a power plant. Briefly, here is what you can do to satisfy yourself about its condition. Take off the cover. Is it clean? Signs pointing overheating probably indicate heavy use caused by jack-rabbit starts, forcing continually through heavy aquatic vegetation, waterlogging, and big overloads. Start the motor and look for thick smoke. Fill the grease port on the lower unit, take it rig for a spin, then look again. If the grease is gone, look out! The gears may be badly worn or other more serious conditions may exist. Bent or nicked props indicate hard, careless use.

It is your money. Try to spend it wisely. Know who you are doing business with. Make sure you can come back even though it may be just for information. Keep in mind that used equipment is usually sold on a where-is-as-is basis. All you can really expect from the seller is a fair deal, not a steal.

Tip of the week

Did you know that oysters can be enjoyed in any month — not only those with an "R"?

A gaping shell means a dead, inedible oyster. Only in-shall oysters which are tightly closed should be used. If raw oysters are not your dish, try them fried, scalloped, baked or even broiled. They are also excellent as a stew or as a stuffing for dressing.

Home freezing is not recommended but commercially frozen oysters are excellent. Oysters are harvested on both the Atlantic and Pacific coasts and on the Gulf of Mexico.

Florida has a large oyster fishery in the Appalachicola area. They are one of nature's richest sources of iron while being high in other minerals and contain most of the essential vitamins. Shucked (shelled) oysters are graded and sold according to size.

Canned oysters may be substituted in many recipes calling for the fresh or frozen kinds. Smoked oysters make a delicious appetizer or hors d'oeuvre.

Area fishing report

By Lorne Racicot

This past week has seen some nice days and some days that made fishing somewhat difficult, due mostly to high winds from the north and northeast. When conditions permitted, the peppergrass beds drew the most attention from anglers seeding bass. These particular areas produced a good many fish and of better than average size.

When the winds wouldn't cooperate bass fishermen hugged the lake edges, especially those having needle grass growth. The Rim Canal also has good numbers of small bass, particularly in the Clewiston area.

Many of the Canal areas where the fish are holding makes for some pretty tight, accurate casting. Even then you will be making the odd foray shoreward to disentangle your lure from a snag or rock because you cast four inches too far. The West side of the lake finds the bass using the hydrilla cover where, though difficult to fish, live shiners are producing good fish in good numbers. On the East side, conditions permit the grass beds have been the best bet. Catches of Black Crappie (speckled perch) are becoming more frequent. They are running to good size and in excellent condition. Live Mississippi crabs and lead head jigs have been most productive.

Except for the Clewiston area, according to reports received, Bluegill and shiners are scarce. The decline, as a matter of record, very few shell-cracker are being caught. To give you an idea of what is being caught on a wind and where let's take a rundown on the information received from the various camps.

Dick Vance of Anglers Marina in Clewiston says bass fishing has been fair to good. Two men fishing in a small tournament the other day came in with 14 bass (tournament limit) that weighed out at 36 pounds, for an average of better than 2 1/2 pounds. Dick says it is surprising how many bass are still being taken on top water plugs such as devil horse and bang o'lure. He also advised that while plastic worms are the standby some good catches of bass have been made on spoon and skirt or strip combos recently.

Live shiners are also doing their thing for those who prefer this method. He tells us that the large bass appear to be holding in the grass beds, generally speaking, but some of the larger models are also being taken on the lake edges. Specks are active in the fallen tree tops in the Rim Canal where Missouri minnows have been the best bait. These fish are running to good size. Strangely enough the bluegill are still active in the grass beds in the lake proper. The Hayfield area is also giving up the 'gills on live crickets.

Glen Hunter of Twin Palms of Lakeport says live wild shiners are producing more and larger fish than anything else. For example Tom Collins of Venice, Fla. had bass to ten pounds as did Wally Aspendahl of Massachusetts. Also, the Forsbach brothers of Lake Placid and shiners are running seven pounds. They too were taken on live wild shiners. Most of the fish were taken in the Monkey Box area.

Black Crappie have been more active lately with some limits being caught, mostly on jigs. Missouri minnows are also catching them. There has been little or no activity noted with the bluegill and shellcrackers. At the J. Mark Camp in Belle Glade, Mike Chalanen says that, wind conditions permitting, good bass are being caught off the grass beds. Just a few days ago Al Hecht of Coral Springs, Fla. had fish that went to 11 pounds 5 ounces caught on plastic worms. Crappie continue to be caught in the Rim Canal on jigs and Missouri minnows fished 3 to 10 feet deep. There have been few bluegills and shell-crackers caught.

All indications are that bass are good in most areas as are Crappie. If bluegills you are looking for then Clewiston may be the best area to seek them. They are waiting for you. Just don't keep them waiting too long.

6,090 acre Prairie acquired

The following news of interest to many has just been received from Mrs. Jean Anderson, executive director of the new Chamber of Commerce and member of the Florida Chapter of The Nature Conservancy.

The Nature Conservancy is a national conservation organization committed to the preservation of natural diversity by protecting lands containing the best examples of all components of our natural world. To date the Conservancy and its members have been responsible for the preservation of 1,634,542 acres of forests, marshes, prairies, mountains, and islands; home to rare and endangered species of wildlife and plants.

2,383 projects have been completed since the acquisition of the first preserve in 1954. The Florida Chapter received its Charter in 1961. Since that time, the Chapter has been instrumental in the protection of over 95,000 acres in more than 50 projects with the State of Florida.

August 1, 1980, 18 months of negotiations culminated in the acquisition of the Ordway-Whitell Kissimmee Prairie for 3.5 million dollars. Researchers in the Conservancy's Science Department have determined that this is the largest remaining remnant of the virgin Kissimmee River Prairie. This grassland ecosystem was one of 37 Kuchler ecosystems not found in protected ownership of a public or private agency.

The parcel has been a protection priority of the National Audubon Society for over 30 years. The Audubon Society has been leading field trips to and conducting research on this site throughout that time. At the request of the National Audubon Society, the Conservancy entered into negotiations for the acquisition of the property.

This nationally significant acquisition will be managed by the Audubon Society as a national ecosystem preserve on a scale similar to that of the Corkscrew Swamp Sanctuary in Collier County. Funds for the acquisition of the property were provided by the Whitell Estate and the Estate of Katherine Ordway. The Nature Conservancy's first land guardian known as "the lady who saved the prairies."

During her life Miss Ordway was responsible for the establishment of a Midwest Prairie Grasslands Preserve System, totalling over 31,000 acres. Since her death, the Conservancy has received grants from her Estate to establish the 55,000 acre Niobrara Prairie in Nebraska, and the 23,000 acre Sycan Marsh in Oregon.

There has been considerable activity among the hunting fraternity for two months now. Rails, doves, gallinules have been legal game during this period. Others have been spending their time doing all those things necessary to be as ready as possible for the opening of the season on deer, turkey, quail and squirrel on Nov. 8.

Sportsmen will be taking to the out-of-doors Nov. 8 with the start of the 1980-81 general Florida hunting season.

"Throughout the season, hunters should use courtesy and sportsmanship, observing both the letter and the spirit of the game laws of Florida," said Col. Robert M. Brantley, executive director of the Game and Fresh Water

Ter Fish Commission. "We in Florida are fortunate to have a wide variety of wildlife to harvest each year. This is due not only to the proper management of our wildlife resources, but also to hunters pursuing their sport in accordance with the regulations," he said.

With the start of the general hunting season, Brantley encouraged hunters to be considerate of each other as well as of non-hunters, using safe hunting practices during their outings.

The Nov. 8 date will mark the opening of the deer season in all regions of the state (no open season in the Florida Keys). Also opening is turkey season, with gobblers only in Leon, Wakulla, Gadsden and Jefferson Counties in the northwest region. Either sex turkeys may be taken in the northeast, central, south and Everglades regions (gobblers only in Alachua County). Crow season also officially opens statewide.

Quail and squirrel season opens in the northwest, northeast, central, south and Everglades regions (with no open season for fox squirrel in Lee, Hendry, Palm Beach, Monroe, Collier, Broward and Dade Counties). The second phase of dove season begins statewide with all-day hunting (one-half hour before sunrise to sunset).

Wild hog season opens in Palm Beach and Alachua Counties and portions of Collier, Dade and Monroe Counties. Bear season opens in Baker and Columbia Counties (bear taken must be checked and tagged at the Commission's Lake City Regional office).

Bear also reminded hunters that if they spot violators of state wildlife and fisheries laws to report such incidents immediately through the Wildlife Alert Program of the Commission.

IN THE CHURCH OF YOUR CHOICE

The Background Of Integrity

There are millions of men in this world whose word is trusted — whose handshake is a binding contract — whose integrity others accept without question.

We've come a long way from the days when a strong man and a stout club were the social graces.

And this growth in man's capacity for integrity has paralleled his growth in religious expression.

Of course, the cynics will point to men and nations who still live by the code of the cave man. Must we believe that the clock of progress has turned . . . is running backward?

The sound, the sensible, the sincere still feel the strength of God's Bible in every handshake. With their children they are finding new spiritual opportunity and hope in the churches they cherish.

Are you with them? Are you, too, pushing forward the frontiers of faith?

Mrs. Grace Graham

With the Thanksgiving holidays just around the corner, and many families planning a special dinner with turkey and all the trimmings, Mrs. Grace Graham of Pahokee shares one of her favorite recipes that can be used to make dressing for the Thanksgiving turkey or hen.

The recipe can also be served along with the meal. Mrs. Graham, a past president of the Pahokee Business and Professional Women's Club is a retired social worker supervisor with H.R.S., and has lived in Pahokee for 22 years.

A member of First Baptist Church, Mrs. Graham is kept busy with her involvement with the Order of Eastern Star No. 184, the Pahokee Garden Club, and F.A.F.F. (The Fun After Fifty Five) Club, which she serves as President of the organization.
